The Lion and the Mouse

A mighty lion was asleep in the jungle. A cheeky little mouse ran up and down the lion's back. The lion woke up. "Who woke me up?" he growled. "It was me," squeaked the terrified little mouse. "I was only playing," he said. "Well, I am going to eat you up!" roared the angry lion.

"Please don't eat me!" cried the frightened mouse. "I will be your friend if you let me go," he begged. The lion looked at the mouse. "That's ridiculous!" he laughed.

The lion laughed so much that he let the mouse go.

Later, the little mouse saw the mighty lion. He was caught in a hunter's net.

"Don't worry. I will help you," said the little mouse. He chewed through the net. The lion escaped. "How can I thank you?" he asked. "Don't thank me. It was my turn to save you. You're my friend," answered the brave little mouse.
